

What's our question?
A quick exploration of learning
approaches for co-creating research questions

Jillian Student

WIMEK and ENP, Wageningen University & Research

Around the table

Empathy mapping

Empathy mapping

---

Benefits

- Time to explore your own ideas
- Space to listen to others
- Not rushing to the first idea
- Exploring possibilities
- Discovering synergies
- Pursuing different ideas

Different engagement with society

Card your enthusiasm

---

Card your Enthusiasm

- Developed at TU Berlin by Nadin Gaasch and Melanie Kryst
- Explore what you understand
- Share what you are unsure about
- Look into how you can integrate your interests

What are your thoughts on learning approaches to co-
create research questions